Water Sports Safety Tips

Ready to explore the world of water sports this summer? It's important to know the dangers and the necessary safety precautions to take while on the water. Check out these tips to help you stay safe on your aquatic adventures.

Swim safety – The most important water safety tip is knowing how to swim. Unsure of your swim skills? Sign up for swim classes at your local city recreation department. Remember to always wear a life vest while on open water.

Play it safe – Resist the temptation to consume alcohol while on the water. According to the US Coast Guard, alcohol continues to be the biggest factor in boating-related accidents and fatalities.

Maintain awareness – Always be aware of your surroundings. Pay attention to water depths, area rules and restrictions, and layout. Know where the closest hospital is in case someone sustains an injury.

Buddy system – There's safety in numbers with water sports. Even if you are kayaking or swimming, make sure that someone is nearby and knows where you are.

Know your limits – Don't overdo it. Pay attention to how you feel and listen to your body to avoid strains and injuries.

Ways to Overcome Life Challenges

These days, life seems to be throwing us challenges left and right. If you're feeling discouraged, you're not alone. Here are a few ways to overcome obstacles and push forward to brighter days.

- Take a step back and view things from a different perspective. Try to look at the hurdle ahead of you as an opportunity to grow and evolve.
- Seek out a friend or family member for support. It's worth reaching out for their emotional support, even if they haven't shared the same experience.
- Try not to let stress spill over into other parts of your life. Remember to take care of yourself. Get adequate sleep, maintain a healthy diet, and exercise regularly.
- Volunteering your time can be a rewarding experience. Helping others who are struggling themselves can also help put things into perspective.

Life has its ups and downs and can be overwhelming at times. But no matter what happens, don't give up! Leverage these experiences as building blocks for better things to come.

Household Tips: Landscaping Trends to Try this Summer

Looking for some ways to liven up your yard this year? Here are a few landscaping trends to look out for when you're ready to make a change.

Grow up – Vertical gardens aren't new to the world of horticulture, but they are gaining in popularity for many reasons. They're perfect for container gardening, and they can even help you waste less water with the right drainage system.

The pollinator – Do your part to help the local ecosystem and promote pollination. Create a pollinator-friendly habitat to attract hummingbirds, bees, and butterflies to your garden.

Go indigenous – Take the worry out of gardening by incorporating native plants into your outdoor space. Native plants can withstand the elements and thrive in their natural environment.

Let it grow – Add a wild aspect to your garden by leaving it untended. You'll spend less time working in your garden and more time basking in its natural beauty.

Smart garden – Automate your watering routine and install a smart irrigation system. Track water evaporation, soil conditions, the weather, you name it! Let the gadgets do the hard work!
